Beyond Off Duty Survival

Developing a Winning Mindset for the Law Enforcement Life

Internationally renowned law enforcement trainers Lt. Dave (JD Buck Savage) Smith and Sgt. Betsy Brantner Smith present a topic rarely covered in a one day training event, Off Duty Officer Safety. But this class is so much more.

Most law enforcement training focuses on getting you home safely at the end of each shift, but we believe you should also “train” for successful relationships as well as your own physical and mental health. Dave and Betsy Smith have authored numerous articles on these topics and now offer a course like no other that can be attended not only by police officers but by their spouses, partners, parents, and other significant people in their lives.

This class teaches attendees what threats they may face off duty and how to respond safely and tactically. We then go even further, helping students to understand how a career in public safety affects our personal relationships both on and off the job. We’ll talk about communication, post-traumatic stress & recovery, and the role that optimism plays in our ability to win not just on the street, but in LIFE!

The Smith’s believe that you must “train for your relationships as hard as you train for your survival.” You can be the best cop, agent, correctional officer, or commander in your agency, but if you want to be a “winner” in your personal life; tactically, mentally and emotionally, this course is essential to your success!
